TRAVEL TIPS

Acclimatization is essential: Spend the first 24 hours in Leh resting to adjust to the high altitude and reduce the risk of Acute Mountain Sickness (AMS). Stay hydrated: Drink plenty of water throughout the trip and avoid excessive alcohol or smoking during the first few days. Carry valid ID proof: Government-issued photo identification is required for permits and hotel check-ins. Pack warm clothing: Even during summer, temperatures can drop significantly, especially in Nubra Valley and Pangong Lake. Dress in layers: Weather can change rapidly, so layered clothing helps you stay comfortable throughout the day. Protect yourself from the sun: Carry sunglasses, sunscreen (SPF 50+), lip balm, and a hat, as UV rays are very strong at high altitudes. Carry essential medicines: Bring personal medications along with basic medicines for headaches, motion sickness, and altitude-related discomfort. Keep cash handy: ATMs are available in Leh but may be limited or unreliable in remote areas such as Nubra Valley and Pangong. Mobile connectivity: Postpaid SIM cards from major Indian operators generally work in Ladakh, while prepaid SIMs from outside Jammu & Kashmir may not function. Respect local culture: Dress modestly while visiting monasteries and always seek permission before photographing local people. Travel responsibly: Avoid littering and help preserve Ladakh's fragile mountain ecosystem. Road conditions: Mountain roads can be rough and travel times may vary depending on weather and road conditions. Carry a power bank: Electricity supply may be limited in remote areas, especially near Pangong Lake. Avoid overexertion: High-altitude destinations such as Pangong Lake and Khardung La can be physically demanding; walk slowly and take regular breaks. Best travel season: May to September offers pleasant weather and access to most tourist attractions and mountain passes.
